HARTMAN GOES TO HIS DEATH WITH A SMILE

Young Slayer Admits He Killed Trooper And Says No One Else Is Implicated.

(By Associated Press.)

Bellefonte, Nov. 30.—Philip A. Hartman, of Anville, was electrocuted in Rockview penitentiary this morning for the murder of State Policeman Francis L. Haley in Adams county in October 1924.

The condemned man was taken to the chair at 7:02 a. m. and pronounced dead by prison physicians at 7:09.

Hartman was led from the death-cell to the chair by a prison guard and Edgar L. Hildebrand, a student at Gettysburg College. A smile appeared on the face of the condemned man as he came through the door leading to the room where the chair is located. His step did not falter as he was placed in the chair.

The smile remained while attendants were adjusting the apparatus before the current was applied. Not a word was uttered by Hartman as he was placed in the chair.

When the death march was started the Reverend C. E. Kalb, prison chaplain, was in front repeating the Lord's prayer. Next came Hartman flanked on one side by Mr. Hildebrand and on the other by a guard.

Before going to the chair Hartman made a statement that he was the slayer of Haley and that no one else was implicated.

The body was claimed by Hartman's father.

WOODS SWAMPED WITH HUNTERS

4430 Licenses Are Issued by County Treasurer Troxell; Season Opens Tuesday Morning.

With "snow or rain" forecast for Tuesday, the opening of the 1925 deer season is expected to be anything but auspicious. All of the elements which could be visited upon the South Mountains today, alive with sportsmen preparing camps and lodges, would not deter the small army of hunters from taking to the field half an hour before sunrise Tuesday, according to reports of the spirit manifest among the camps.

Deer are reported to be exceptionally large and unusually plentiful this year, and the total bag during the fifteen-day period is expected to far exceed that of last year. Between 8,000 and 10,000 hunters are expected to course through the slopes of the South Mountains when the season gets under way.

Nearly 100 more licenses have been issued in Adams county this year than last when 4353 were issued at the office of County Treasurer Harry J. Troxell. This morning, license number 4430 was issued by Mr. Troxell.

Most of the hunting of deer is done by organized camps and each party has already selected its own particular spot. It is a fact that nine out of every ten camps are made up of experienced hunters who are familiar with the ground over which they make the drives. The majority of the camps are permanent, the log cabin and the bungalow replacing the canvas tents.

There is little stalking of deer done in this state. The still-hunter stands very little show unless he hangs on the flanks of larger parties engaged in a drive and takes the chance of getting a shot at a buck that has eluded the men on the crossings. Organized effort has proved highly effective in deer hunting; so much so, that it is not exceptional for some camps to get their quota of six bucks in a single day.

Big Kills First Day
In making drives hunters follow the line of least resistance and go at once to those districts where deer are known to abound. Nearly always the best deer country is found on the edge of cultivated tracts. After a few days the deer go into the back country where the hunting is more difficult, but on the first day the greatest kills are close to the fields.

Some of the better-known hunting camps in Adams county are the Taylor, Marsh Creek, Arendtsville, Benderville, Brysonia, Camp No. 18, Spout, Cashtown, McKnightstown, Kane and New Oxford.

"HIT-AND-RUN" MOTORIST KILLS DILLSBURG WOMAN

State Police Seek Driver Of Machine That Fatally Injured Woman.

A "hit-and-run" automobile driver, said to have been traveling at high speed in the direction of Gettysburg, struck and almost instantly killed Mrs. Mary Mumper, 84, in front of her home at Dillsburg, Sunday evening. The local substation of the state police has been notified to be on the look-out for a car, a fairly good description of which was furnished by witnesses of the accident.

Was Crossing Road
The driver of the car, witnesses say, after striking the woman and dragging her ten feet, dimmed his lights and sped away. He left his victim lying in the highway.

Mrs. Mumper, a widow, and an invalid daughter made their home together. Another sister on the opposite side of the road heard the woman's screams and saw the auto speed off. Mrs. Mumper was crossing the street to her home at the time.

State police sometime later were furnished with a description of the car by witnesses of the tragedy and started a hunt for the automobile in garages here and in nearby towns. An automobile with bloodstained fenders, they admitted, would be their only clue.

Dies Almost Instantly
Several witnesses picked up the woman and carried her into her home, where she died a minute later. An examination by Dr. Francis Heikes showed her to have suffered fractures of both legs, right shoulder and several ribs. One of the broken ribs pierced a lung, which, it is believed, was the immediate cause of death.

The tragedy occurred about 5:30 o'clock, but state police say they were not notified until half an hour later. Witnesses say the car, of popular make, was going at high speed when it struck the woman, and that no horn was sounded.

Surviving Mrs. Mumper are three daughters, Mrs. Annie Dailey, who lived with her; Mrs. J. A. Kilmore, of Mechanicsburg, and Mrs. George E. Keefe, of Danville; three brothers, George M. King, of York; Emmanuel King, of Harrisburg, and the Rev. Dr. C. B. King, of Pittsburgh, and one sister, Mrs. Lizzie Myers, of Hanover. Coroner L. U. Zech, of York county, after an investigation selected a jury of six Dillsburg residents for an inquest this week to determine formally the cause of the woman's death.

ONE BANK HAS XMAS CHECKS OUT TONIGHT

Other Institutions Join In Distribution Of $200,000 For Christmas Spending.

Beginning tonight and continuing almost daily for the next ten days, Gettysburg and Adams county banks will send out an abundance of pre-Christmas cheer in the form of checks to depositors in Christmas Savings Clubs.

It is conservatively estimated that between $175,000 and $200,000 in Christmas club checks will be distributed to men, women and children in Adams county, whose foresight and saving ability during the year have netted them rewards ranging from several dollars to several hundred dollars each. Interest at the rate of 4 per cent is paid on all accounts which are fully paid up.

The Christmas and holiday spirit has made itself manifest in many Gettysburg stores, and nationwide predictions are that the largest holiday business in recent years is "just over the horizon."

It is said that persons not only here but elsewhere have started buying for Christmas several weeks in advance of last year, and demands for Christmas goods promise to exceed the most sanguine expectations of local merchants.

Send Checks Today
The First National Bank, of Gettysburg, will be the first to have its Christmas saving club checks in the mail, the harbingers of the holiday season being placed in the mails this evening. It is estimated at the bank that the amount of their checks will be approximately $20,000.

Within the next ten days all banks in the county which offer this service to their depositors will begin placing their checks in the mails. Eight banks in the county reported saving clubs in excess of $150,000, with one large Gettysburg bank unreported.

All of the banks reported that the (Continued on Second Page)

His Emotions Are Different on Eve of Deer Season

Postmaster Robert C. Miller Withnesses Approach Of "Killing" With Sadness.

On the eve of the deer hunting season, the emotions experienced by Robert C. Miller, Gettysburg postmaster, are somewhat akin to what they probably are the day after an election, when a Democratic victory is recorded in Adams county—dejection and sadness.

Contrary to the feelings of most able-bodied Adams county men today, a host of whom will be in the mountains along the border of the county at daybreak Tuesday shouldering a rifle and in search of deer, Postmaster Miller simply dreads the approach of dawn tomorrow and the crack of the guns.

For 't means death to many of his companions. At his mountain palace—Graeffenburg Inn—where he glories in antiques, golf in season and three square meals each day prepared by a polished chef, when he isn't distributing mail behind the window of the Gettysburg postoffice, Mr. Miller has struck up an intimate acquaintanceship with does, bucks and fawn alike.

"You know, I hate to see the deer-killing season open," he ex- (Continued on Second Page)

C. B. DOUGHERTY IS BOOSTED FOR CONGRESS SEAT

Gettysburg Councilman Has Excellent Chance at Democratic Nomination, Friends Say.

Charles B. Dougherty, member of Gettysburg town council and, as manager of the Gettysburg Ice and storage company, one of the town's leading business men, will be a candidate for the congressional nomination in the Democratic party at the primary election next May.

Mr. Dougherty hasn't said so yet, but many of his friends have been quietly working in his behalf in recent weeks, and it is said by party leaders in the district who are in a position to know what's going on that he is definitely and assuredly a candidate, whether he chooses to be or not. They are simply going to insist upon it.

These Democratic party leaders say that Mr. Dougherty is the one man in Adams county who can wrest the congressional seat in the York-Adams district from the Republicans, who now hold it with Franklin Menges, of York, as the member.

Once In Thirty Years
"The fact is," they say, "Adams county has had only one Democratic congressman in the last thirty years, and the county has not been represented in Congress by a home man since 1917, when C. William Beales, Baltimore street druggist, retired, and it's high time we elect not only an Adams county man, but a Democrat."

Some Republican leaders in Adams county do not look with disfavor upon the possible candidacy of Mr. Dougherty, it is said upon good authority, and while they could not be expected to actively support a Democrat, they would not actively oppose Mr. Dougherty, providing he gets the nomination in the primary, and Mr. Menges is renominated by the Republicans, as it appears now he will be. Contrary to statements in Philadelphia newspapers, Congressman Menges, however, is almost certain to have opposition for renomination within the Republican party. But that is another story.

Appeals To Native Pride
Native pride of Adams county people will stand Mr. Dougherty in good stead in winning both the nomination and election, his friends further point out. More than 20 years ago, he demonstrated that he has a large personal following in Adams county when he was elected county treasurer. This following was increased in Adams, and spread into York county, —the other unit of this congressional district,—when Mr. Dougherty led a field of six strong Democrats in the (Continued on Second Page.)

SCOUTS THANK CONTRIBUTORS

12-Months Rent Paid Out of Contributions to Fund; Balance to be Used to Buy Equipment.

Scoutmaster Clyde Bream of Troop 3, Boy Scouts, Gettysburg, this morning expressed his appreciation and thanks to the people of Gettysburg and Adams county and some few others not residents of the county, who contributed to the Boy Scout drive to pay rental expenditures of the local organization.

A receipt for $150, from H. T. Weaver, proprietor of the building in which the Scouts have their headquarters, was turned over to Scoutmaster Bream this morning, designating that the rent of the Scout headquarters has been paid from July 31st, 1925, to July 31st, 1926.

"I want to express the thanks of the Boy Scouts and of myself to the many public spirited and generously inclined residents who donated to the fund. We sincerely appreciate the kindness so generously demonstrated and we will continue in the future, as we have in the past, to demonstrate our sincerity and earnestness in deserving this kind support. We are always ready and eager to do 'our bit' whenever we are called upon for services of any nature."

Total Is $178
The above expression of thanks was received from Scoutmaster Bream and the Scouts under his command.

Receipt of a $2 check from the auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans Camp 112, Gettysburg, swelled the fund to $178. A balance of $28 is being kept in trust because of anticipated donations from lodges and fraternal organizations. A movement to this end has been under way for several days and other organizations are expected to contribute to the Scout fund.

When all subscriptions are received, all moneys over and above $150 will be used to purchase coal, pay light bills and purchase general equipment for the Boy Scouts. The entire amount received in the drive will be used for scout purposes only.

G. J. BENNER IS SUSPENDED FROM BAR FOR 60 DAYS

Defeated Democratic Candidate For Judge May Be Reinstated In January.

George J. Benner, Gettysburg attorney, who recently was ordered to pay Mrs. Alice C. Seymour, Rosindale, Massachusetts, the proceeds of two mortgages, totaling $2500, has been suspended from practice for sixty days by Judge E. M. Biddle, Jr., of Carlisle, it became known today.

The suspension dates from November 24, the date of the filing of the Carlisle jurist's order with Prothonotary C. B. Yohe. According to Prothonotary Yohe, attorneys for Mr. Benner took the court's decision to their offices as soon as it was filed.

May Be Reinstated
Judge Biddle, in suspending Mr. Benner, orders that, if he so desires, the Gettysburg attorney shall be reinstated as a practicing attorney if he makes application after January 23, 1926, and, in the meantime, nothing further appears against his "private or professional character than is apparent from the records."

Mr. Benner's age and his presumed inability to earn a livelihood at any other occupation or employment were taken into consideration by Judge Biddle in passing sentence on the local attorney. In this connection, Judge Biddle says:

"The age of the respondent, too, makes it certain that, in case of permanent disbarment, he would be unable to enter into another employment or occupation which would assure him a livelihood; and, under these circumstances and conditions, we feel that the period of disbarment should be made quite short, while, at the same time, we feel that the conduct of the respondent in the pending case can not be completely overlooked or condoned."

Action On Petition
The rule issued upon Mr. Benner to show cause why his name should not be stricken from the list of attorneys in Adams county followed the presentation in court here of a petition by George Ross Hull, Harrisburg, attorney for Mrs. Seymour, to have Mr. Benner pay to her the proceeds of two mortgages entrusted to him for disposition more than 20 years ago. In a counter-petition, attorneys for Mr. Benner cited that no demand had been made upon him for the money, as the reason he had not made settlement with Mrs. Seymour.

Mr. Hull alleged, however, that frequent demand had been made upon Mr. Benner in behalf of his client. An attachment for Mr. Benner's arrest was issued by the local court in 1906, but was never served upon the attorney, it being shown by petitions presented in court here that Mr. Benner had absented himself from the jurisdiction of the court for a number of years.

After settlement was made, the attachment was discharged and the present rule to show cause why Mr. Benner should not be disbarred was issued by Judge Biddle.

Judge Biddle's Opinion

congressional district as candidates for delegate to the Democratic national convention in New York city when John W. Davis was nominated.

Former Congressman Samuel F. Gladfelter, of York county, is already announced as a candidate for his old seat in the Democratic primary. At least one other York county Democrat has a well defined boom launched in his behalf, it is stated. With Mr. Dougherty in the race, the three-cornered contest is almost certain to net Mr. Dougherty the nomination, providing democracy in Adams county stands solidly behind him, with York county splitting its normal Democratic vote. In addition to the complete Adams vote, Mr. Dougherty is certain to get a generous portion of the Democratic vote in York county.

So, there you are. That's the way Mr. Dougherty's friends have it "doped out" and disinterested parties agree "it sounds reasonable politically."

In the Coolidge sweep, Pennsylvania elected a solid Republican congressional ticket. But Democratic leaders hereabouts say it's going to be different next year. With the primary election in May less than six months off, the political pot has already begun to simmer and some interesting developments are looked for from now on.

STOCK MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Nov. 30.—Traces of weakness still were evident in the stock market as trading was resumed today. Selling pressure was directed against the high priced motors and specialties causing an initial break of five points in DuPont. Increased liquidation in specialties and an advance in the renewal rate for call money to five per cent checked the upward tendency of railroad shares. Pressure became quite severe against some of the high priced shares.

The grooms' gifts to the bride were a diamond lavalier and a diamond-set wrist watch.

Dinner is served. Immediately after the wedding a dinner was served. Guests from Gettysburg attended the informal reception following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. George will leave Wednesday for a week's honeymoon trip to Philadelphia and Reading. They will travel by auto.

Out of town guests included James Charas, Shamokin; Mrs. N. Demas, Shamokin; Jack Damios, Westminster; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ballas, Nick and Steve Anthony and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pettis, Columbia; John Bardax, Columbia; Mr. and Mrs. John Christ, Uhrchessville, Ohio; John Stergios, Lebanon; Arestas Repantis, Columbia; John Pete, Lebanon; Arthur Otis, Shamokin, and Edward Rupp, York.

The romance, which culminated in the marriage yesterday, had its beginning in a little town in Greece a number of years ago, when Mr. George and Miss Anthony were schoolmates. When Mr. George came to America he told his sweetheart that he would send for her, when he had "made good" in the new land.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony and family moved to America several years ago, and the romance that started in Greece continued in the new country.

G. J. BENNER

the provisions of section 74 of the act of 14th April, 1834, P. L. 333. The rule was issued as a result of a proceeding instituted in behalf of Alice C. Seymour, under the provisions of section 28 of the act of June 16, 1836, P. L. 784. Stated briefly, that proceeding was started by a petition averring that the respondent, George J. Benner, when acting as attorney for the petitioner, had received a considerable amount of money belonging to her; that, after repeated demands upon him for an accounting and payment, he had neglected and refused to pay the petitioner the money belonging to her, and had retained it himself. In that proceeding a rule for an attachment against the respondent was made absolute in 1906, but the attachment was never executed, nor was any return thereto made by the sheriff; and, in October of the present year, a petition was presented on behalf of the same petitioner against the respondent and a rule to show cause why an alias attachment should not be awarded was issued and served upon him. Thereafter an adjustment was made, which the client accepted as satisfactory, and, at the instance of the parties, that rule was discharged and the existing attachment dissolved. Following that, however, the present rule was issued by the court at its own instance. An answer to the rule has been filed by the respondent, and his attorneys have requested the court to dispose of the matter immediately upon the record as it stands, without the appointment of an amicus curiae, without the filing of a replication, and without the taking of depositions or testimony. The court is satisfied to make disposition of the case under these conditions.

"From an examination of the record, it appears that repeated demands were made on behalf of Mrs. Seymour for an accounting and for the payment of the money received for her by the respondent, and these demands were not complied with by the respondent, who retained the money from some time in 1904 or 1905 until October of the present year. It is true that his answers filed in the proceeding stated that he was not aware that the attachment had been awarded against him, and that during the latter part of the time that he retained the money he had been given to understand by the attorney for Mrs. Seymour, who succeeded him, that no adverse proceedings against him would be pushed without further notice to him. This, however, does not affect the original offense, and, as we view it, the facts that are admitted by the pleadings bring the respondent squarely within the provisions of section 74 of the act of 1834, which make it 'the duty of the court to cause the name of such attorney to be stricken from the records of the attorneys, and to prevent him from prosecuting longer in the said court.' The pending rule must, therefore, be made absolute. At the same time, the conditions and circumstances of this case are such that, in the opinion of the court, to make the disbarment of the respondent permanent would be to impose an excessive punishment; and the appellate courts have ruled that it is not obligatory on the court to make a disbarment of this kind permanent.

"Smith's Appeal, 179 Pa. 14. "It appeared from the record of this case and from the statements of counsel on both sides on the former hearings before the sitting judge that, while the respondent had not heretofore received a formal punishment, he had, in effect, been substantially punished; and it also appeared that he has for a number of years past been practicing in this court with the knowledge of the judge who issued the original attachment against him, and of his successor, and of the other members of the bar. The age of the respondent, too, makes it certain that, in case of permanent disbarment, he would be unable to enter into another employment or occupation which would assure him a livelihood and, under these circumstances and conditions, we feel that the period of disbarment should be made quite short, while, at the same time, we feel that the conduct of the respondent in the pending case can not be completely overlooked or condoned.

"And now, November 24th, 1925, the rule in this case is made absolute; and it is ordered that the name of the respondent, George J. Benner, be stricken from the record of the attorneys of this court. It is further ordered that, if the respondent shall make application for reinstatement at any time subsequent to the 23rd day of January, 1926, his application for reinstatement will be granted, if, in the meantime, nothing further appears against his private or professional character than is apparent from the record before us."

Byron W. "Rube" Yarrison, of Portland Club, Is Traded to Los Angeles in First Big Deal.

Byron W. "Rube" Yarrison, of Montgomery, Pa., former Gettysburg College pitcher and outfielder, is one of the figures in the Pacific Coast League's first big trade for the 1926 season. Yarrison, who has pitched for Portland for the past two seasons, goes to the Los Angeles Club with "Truck" Hannaf, catcher, in exchange for George Lyons, right handed pitcher, and cash.

Six years ago "Yarry," as he was known at college, was a local favorite. He played in the outfield for Gettysburg and was a consistent hitter for Ira Plank's proteges. After pitching and winning a few games, including a 10-0 shut-out over Dickinson, he signed with Hanover in the Blue Ridge League.

Since then "Rube" has covered a large part of the U. S., going to Rocky Mount in the Virginia League and from there to Connie Mack's Athletics. He spent half of the 1922 season with the Athletics, being sold outright in July to Portland. Brooklyn gave "Yarry" a trial the following year, but again he failed to last the entire season.

"Rube," as his friends here well know, is one who worries not and is probably having a glorious time seeing the sights on the Pacific slope. His trade to Los Angeles is really advantageous to him inasmuch as he gets on a better ball club, owned by William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum magnate who owns the Chicago Cubs.

Keep It Clean

IF YOU would reduce your gas bills, you must first clean your appliances. For example, take the gas range which is on duty 365 days in the year, three times a day, with occasional overtime for teas and late suppers.

The top burners of your range should be boiled on the average of once a month in a strong solution made by dissolving washing soda or lye in water. Following the boiling operation, the burners should be brushed and all dirt or foreign matter removed from the holes. Before replacing and using, rinse the burners in clean water and dry them.

To prevent parts, including the oven, from rusting, rub a good neutral oil on them once a week.

"Not yet. I'll tell you everything if you'll promise not to breathe a word, not to interfere until Henri has a chance to square himself. I think I've earned the right to demand that much. I told you the whole thing was counterfeited—was the work of Joe McCaskey. I couldn't believe Henri was up to such villainy. He's dissolute, weak, vain—anything you choose—but he's not voluntarily criminal. Well, I went to work on him. I pretended to—'the Countess again shivered with disgust. 'Oh, you saw what I was doing. I hated myself, but there was no choice. Things came to a climax last night. I don't like to talk about it—think about it—but you're bound to hear. I consented to go out with him. He dragged me through the dance-halls and the saloons—made me drink with him, publicly, and with the scum of the town.' Noting the expression on her hearer's face, the Countess laughed shortly, mirthlessly. 'Shock, wasn't it? Low, indecent, wretched? That's what everybody is saying. Dawson is humming with it. God! How he humiliated me! But I loosened his tongue. I got most of the details—not all, but enough. It was late, almost daylight, before I succeeded. He slept all day, stupefied, and so did I, when I wasn't too ill."

"He remembered something about it, he had some shadowy recollection of talking too much. When he woke up he sent for me. Then we had it. He denied everything, of course. He lied and he twisted, but I'm the stronger—always have been. I beat him down, as usual. I could have felt sorry for the poor wretch only for what he had put me through. He went out not long ago."

"Where to? Tell me—"

"To the Police—to Colonel Cavendish. I gave him the chance to make a clean breast of everything and save his hide, if possible. If he weakens I'll take the bit in my teeth."

Roulette stood motionless for a moment; then in deep emotion she exclaimed: "I'm so glad! And yet it must have been a terrible sacrifice. I think I understand how you must loathe yourself. It was a very generous thing to do, however. Not many women could have risen to it."

"I hope he doesn't make me tell. I haven't much pride left, but—I'd like to save what remains, for you can imagine what Cavendish, for a moment, then in deep emotion she exclaimed: "I'm so glad! And yet it must have been a terrible sacrifice. I think I understand how you must loathe yourself. It was a very generous thing to do, however. Not many women could have risen to it."

Impulsively Roulette bent forward and kissed the speaker. "Colonel Cavendish will understand. He's a man of honor. But, after all, when a woman really—cares, there's a satisfaction, a compensation, in sacrifice, no matter how great."

Hilda Courteau's eyes were misty, their dark-fringed lids trembled wearily shut. "Yes," she nodded, "I suppose so. Bitter and sweet! When a woman of my sort, my kind, and experience, lets herself really care, she tastes both. All I can hope is that Pierre never learns what he made me pay for loving him. He wouldn't understand—yet."

She opened her eyes again and met the earnest gaze upon her. "I dare say you think I feel the same toward him as you do, that I want him, that I'm hungry for him. Well, I'm not. I'm past that. I've been through fire, and fire purifies. Now run along, child. I'm sure everything will come out right."

The earlier snowfall had diminished when Roulette stepped out into the night, but a gusty, boisterous wind had risen and this filled the air with blinding clouds of fine, hard particles, whirled up from the streets, and the girl was forced to wade through newly formed drifts that rose over the sidewalks, in places nearly to her knees. The wind flapped her garments and cut her bare cheeks like a knife; when she pushed her way into the Rialto and stamped the snow from her feet her face was wet with tears; but they were frost tears. She dried them quickly and with a song in her heart she hurried back to the lunch-counter and climbed upon her favorite stool. There it was that Doret and his two elderly companions found her.

"Well, we sprung him," Tom announced.

"All we done was sign on the dotted line," Jerry explained. "But, say, if that boy hops out of town he'll cost us a lot of money."

"How's he going to hop out?" Tom demanded. "That's the hell of this country—there's no getting away."

Jerry snorted derisively. "No getting away? What are you talking about? Ain't the Boundary within ninety miles? Ain't plenty of people made get-aways? All they need is a dog-team and a few hours' start of the Police."

If I was him I'd make that Frog hop, you hear me."

"Poleon met Roulette's worried glance with a reassuring smile. "I been t'inkin' 'bout dat, too. Wat you say I go pardners wit' him, eh? I got dog-team an' fine claim on hill-top. S'pose I geeve him half-interests 'to go wit' me?" eagerly queried the girl.

"Already I spoke it to him. He say mebbe so, but firs' he's got li' business here."

"Of course! His case. But that will be cleared up. Mark what I say. Yes!—Roulette nodded happily—take him with you, Poleon—out where things are clean and healthy and where he can get a new start. Oh, you make me very happy!"

The woodsman laid a big hand gently over hers. In a low voice he murmured: "Dat's all I want, ma cour—'to make you happy. If dat claim is wort' million dollar it ain't too much to pay, but—I'm scare she's 'noder bum."

The song was still sounding in Roulette's heart when she sat down at the faro-table, and all through the evening it seemed to her that the revelry round about was but an echo of her gladness. Pierre was free, his name was clean. Probably ere this the whole truth was known to the Mounted Police and by to-morrow it would be made public.

Moreover, he and Poleon were to be partners. That generous woodsman, because of his affection for her, proposed to take the young Roulette. By the time he found her low to his heels and make a man of him. That was like him—always giving much and taking little. Well, she was Poleon's sister. Who could tell what might result from this new union of interest? Of course, there was no pay out there on that mountain-crest, but hard work, honest poverty, an end of these demoralizing surroundings were bound to affect Pierre only for the better. Roulette blessed the name of Hilda Courteau, who had made this possible, and of Poleon Doret, too.

"Poleon of the great heart, who loved her so sincerely, so unselfishly. He never failed her; he was a brother, truly—the best, the cheeriest, the most loyal in the world. Roulette was amazed to realize what a part in her life the French Canadian had played. His sincere affection was about the biggest thing that had come to her, so it seemed."

Occupied with such comforting thoughts, Roulette failed to note that the evening had passed more quickly than usual, and that it was after midnight. When she did realize that fact, she wondered what could have detained Lucky Broad. Promptness was a habit with him; he and Bridges usually reported at least a half-hour ahead of time.

She caught sight of the pair, finally, through the wide archway, and saw that they were surrounded by an excited crowd, a crowd that grew swiftly as some whisper, some intelligence, spread with electric rapidity through the barroom. Yielding to a premonition that something was amiss, Roulette asked the look-out to relieve her, and rising, she hurried into the other hall. Even before she had come within sound of Lucky's voice the cause of the general excitement was made known to her. It came in the form of an exclamation, a word or two snatched out of the air. "Courteau!" "Dead!" "Shot—back street—body just found!"

Fiercely Roulette fought her way through the press, an unvoiced question trembling upon her lips. Broad turned at her first touch.

"Tough, ain't it?" said he. "Me and the Kid stumbled right over him—kicked him out of the snow. We thought he'd been froze."

"We never dreamed he'd been shot till we got him clean down to the drug-store," Bridges supplemented. "Shot in the back, too."

Questions were flying back and forth now. Profiting by the confusion, Roulette dragged Broad aside and queried, breathlessly: "Was he dead—quite dead—?"

"Oh, sure!"

"Who—shot him?" The question came with difficulty. Lucky stared at his interrogator queerly, then he shrugged.

"Quien sabe? Nobody seen or heard the shooting. He'd been croaked a long while when we found him."

going to prove anything? The Count's been dead for hours. He was all drifted—"

Broad was interrupted by the Mocha Kid, who entered out of the night at that instant with the announcement: "Well, they got him! Rock found him, and he denies it, but they've got him at the Barracks, puttin' him through the third degree. I don't mind sayin' that Frenchman needed croakin' had, and they'd ought to give Phillips a vote of thanks and a Bronx tablet."

Mocha's words added to Roulette's terror, for it showed that other minds ran as did hers. Already, it seemed to her, Pierre Phillips had been adjudged guilty. Through the murk of fright, of apprehension in which her thoughts were racing there came a name—Poleon Doret. Here was deep trouble, grave peril, a threat to her new-found happiness.

Poleon, her brother, would know what to do, for his head was clear, his judgment was unerring. He never failed her. Blindly she ran for her wraps, hurriedly she flung them on, then plunged out into the night. As she scurried through the street, panic-stricken, beset, one man's name was in her thoughts, but another's was upon her lips. Over and over she kept repeating: "Poleon! Oh, Poleon!"

CHAPTER XXVII

The news of Count Courteau's death traveled fast. Poleon Doret was not long in hearing of it, and of course he went at once in search of Roulette. By the time he found her the girl's momentary panic had been succeeded by a quite unnatural self-possession; her perturbation had changed to an intense but governable agitation, and her mind was working with a clarity and a rapidity more than normal. This power of rising to an emergency she had doubtless inherited from her father.

"One-armed" Kirby had been a man of resource, and so long as he remained sober, he had never lost his head. Swiftly the girl told of the instant suspicion that had attached to Phillips and of his prompt apprehension.

"Who done dat shootin' if he don't?" Doret inquired, quickly.

"Joe McCaskey—or Frank," Roulette answered with positiveness. "Poleon started. Through the gloom he stared incredulously at the speaker."

"I'm sure of it, now that I've had time to think," the girl declared. "That's why I ran for you. Now listen! I promised not to tell this, but—I must. Courteau confessed to his wife that he and the McCaskeys trumped up that charge against Pierre. They paid Courteau well for his part—or they promised to—and he perjured himself, as did they."

Hilda got the truth out of him while he was drunk. Of course he denied it later, but she broke him down, and this evening, just before we got home, he promised to go to Colonel Cavendish and make a clean breast of everything. He went out for that purpose, but—evidently he lacked courage to go through with it. Otherwise how did he come to be on the back street? The McCaskeys live somewhere back yonder, don't they?"

"Sure!" Poleon meditated, briefly. "Mebbe so you're right," he said, finally.

"I know I'm right," Roulette cried. "The first thing to do is find them. Where are they?"

"I don't see 'em no place."

"Then we must tell the colonel to look them up."

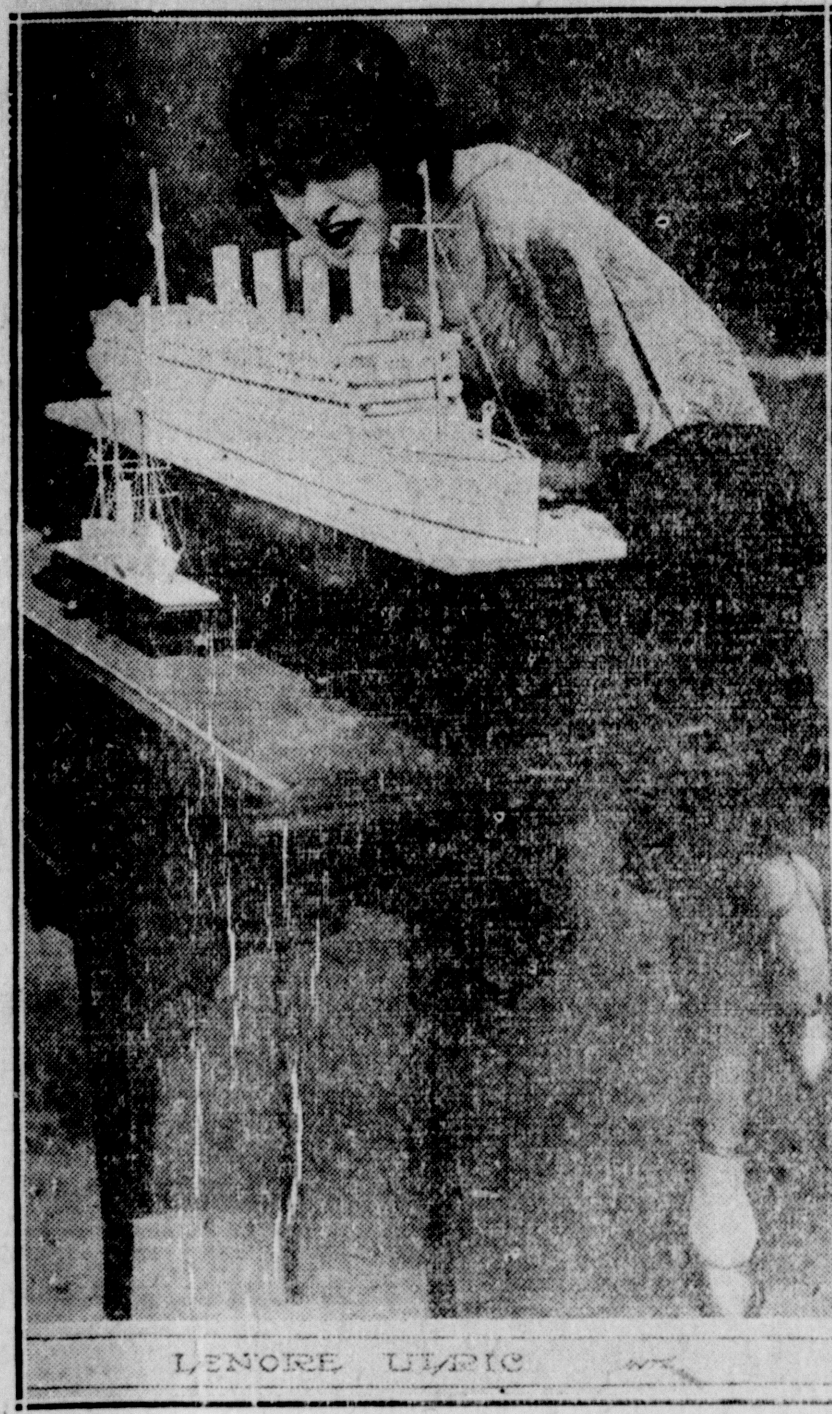

But Doret's brows remained puckered in thought. "Wait!" he exclaimed. "I got idea of my own. If dem feller kill Courteau dey ain't nowhere 'roun' here. Dey beat it, firs' ting."

"To Hunker? Perhaps—"

"No. For de Bounry." Poleon slapped his thigh in sudden enlightenment. "By golly! Dat's why I don't see 'em no place. You stay here. I make sure."

He turned and strode away, but Roulette followed at his heels. "I'm going, too," she stoutly asserted. "Don't argue. I'll bet ten to one we find their cabin empty."

SINGLEY AND SPANGLER ON ALL-STATE 11

Swab Selected For Second Team Honors by Philadelphia Sports Writer on Sunday.

Captain Ray Singley, end, and Charley Spangler, quarterback, two stars of the Gettysburg College football team, were honored yesterday by Stoney McLinn, Philadelphia Public Ledger sports writer, who placed them on his first All Pennsylvania eleven. Marlin Swab, guard, was named on the second team.

In selecting an All Pennsylvania team from the leading small colleges of the state, Mr. McLinn continues a custom that was made popular by Ross E. Kauffman, collegiate editor for the North American for many years. The North American is no longer published; so "Bill" Duncan, Gettysburg alumnus and friend of McLinn, urged him to make the selection this season. Mr. McLinn is well qualified to pick an All Pennsylvania team inasmuch as he made a tour of nearly all the small institutions in the state, writing special stories about each team.

Gettysburg, 1925 small college champions of the state, has two men on the premier eleven for the first time in the institution's history. Mr. Kauffman gave "Snaps" Emanuel an end position on the first team in 1922 and second all state fullback in 1923.

Editor's Comment

Commenting on the various players, Mr. McLinn says:

"First off, the lad who was easily the best end in the 'league' won't be on our team because he played in only one game. Lou Korn probably would have been recognized throughout the country as a candidate for All-American wing honors this year.

"Unfortunately, Korn was injured in Swarthmore's first game and was unable to play thereafter. On an all-star team we must have players who were in all the games or at least a good part of the important battles.

"Singley, Gettysburg's captain, was in all the big contests played by his team, and he is a star who would make good on any eleven. The same may be said for Malcolm, of Franklin and Marshall.

"These boys were hard, sure tacklers, fast in getting down the field and excellent pass receivers. For substitutes we would have Seymour, of Swarthmore, and Mulloy, of Villanova.

"No team can go far without strong, aggressive tackles—lads who use their heads as well as their muscles. In Clark, of Muhlenberg, and Sunwalt, of Haverford, we believe we have the pair for an all-star eleven.

"Both Clark and Sunwalt were in the thick of every fight. They did their jobs up to the mark, offensively as well as defensively. For alternates we would pick Hunsicker, of Ursinus, and Dougherty, of St. Joseph.

Alternate Guard

"The guards are scarcely less important than the tackles. Ward, of Swarthmore, and Bittle, of Dickinson, are the two big boys, and any number of men who know their football say this pair would make it tough for an opposing eleven to accomplish anything around the center of the line.

"Alternate guards would be Mc-

Alpin, of Muhlenberg, and Swab, of Gettysburg. This pair got everything from the 'stevedore job' on the line that could be squeezed from it in the way of individual glory.

"Although there were several star centers in our home state, we shall go into the neighboring commonwealth of Delaware to pick the player who is generally rated the star of the 'conference.' Captain Kramer, of the Newark university eleven, is the man.

"Kramer was a sure snapper-back, a rover who makes tackles in the open and ruined passes and a leader who inspired his men to do their utmost at all times. For alternate center, we would want Lashley, of Dickinson.

"Spangler, of Gettysburg, wins the quarterback post without much discussion. That lad did everything well on a gridiron. His ball-bearing and passing and drop-kicking were brilliant. He was a clever field general.

"Slemmer, the little Muhlenberg back, would be the alternate quarter. His specialty was field-goal booting, but he was a smart and aggressive player in all departments.

Borrelli Picked

"Borrelli, of Muhlenberg, although he was pretty well stopped in a couple of games, remains the spectacular star of the small college gridiron. He rose to great heights against Lafayette and Lehigh. He is first choice for halfback.

"Broderick, of Villanova, did not play throughout all the games. The system of Harry Stuhldreher, the coach, called for substitutions on the wholesale. But we are told that against Rutgers and Muhlenberg, it was the all-round play of Broderick, which was in so small measure responsible for the wins.

"Ned Wilcox, of Swarthmore, gets the fullback job on the first eleven. He was a great back on the attack, and some think a greater player on the defense.

"Alternate halfbacks would be Carpenter, of Dickinson, and Stehman, of F. and M., with Manger, of P. M. C., to go in at the fullback post as a substitute for Wilcox.

"It would be possible to mention a dozen players for each position who performed sensationally in some of the games. This would take in some of the colleges which have no players on our first and second teams.

"However, the teams as arranged comprise what we are told were the better players in the important games. There is little difference between the two elevens. And that's which!"

"Moose" McCormick To Coach Army Nine

Harold E. "Moose" McCormick, who became famous in baseball as a pinch hitter for the New York Giants in 1912 and 1913, has been appointed coach of the Army baseball team for next year, succeeding Hans Lobert, resigned. For the past few years McCormick has been graduate manager of athletics at Bucknell.

FARMER KILLED EATING DINNER

Two Are Held For Murder of Farmer, Shot While Eating His Thanksgiving Dinner.

Crisfield, Md., Nov. 30.—Ernest (Tom) McCready was held by a coroner's jury in connection with the killing of John (Sambo) Sterling, farmer, who was shot to death as he sat at the supper table with his wife at their home at Cass Corner, near here, Thursday night. William Smith, at whose home McCready was arrested by Sheriff Luther Daugherty a few hours after the shooting, also was held without bail. McCready and Smith were taken to the Somerset county jail at Princess Anne to await action of the grand jury.

The murder was the climax of a feud that has existed between Sterling and McCready for some time. McCready formerly boarded at the Sterling home and it is said that he was forced to leave by Sterling, who objected to the other's attentions to Mrs. Sterling.

Husband Told Of Threat The men met twice during the morning and each time a quarrel developed. Mrs. Sterling said Thursday night that earlier in the day her husband told her he had been threatened by McCready.

Smith is said to have borne a grudge against Sterling as a result of the latter having had him arrested several months ago on the charge of having moonshine liquor in his possession.

Sterling was sitting next to a window when a load from a shotgun crashed through the unshaded window and struck him in the head, killing him instantly. Sheriff Daugherty was notified and, knowing of the Sterling-McCready feud, headed a hastily organized posse to search for the latter.

XMAS CHECKS

It will be gratifying to local business people and members of Christmas Savings Clubs of local banks, alike, to learn that the banks are speeding up their machinery to facilitate distribution of the Christmas money this year earlier than in previous years. The announcement that at least one bank expects to "get the jump" on the others by issuing checks before the present week is ended is especially interesting.

Each year, the banks distribute larger savings to Christmas shoppers, attesting to an increasing thriftiness on the part of the people of town and county.

In fact, the Christmas Savings Club idea has been the greatest boon to thriftiness and saving of money that has been evolved in many years. It has brought greater happiness into many homes, for an increasingly large number of people have ready money to use in expressing their sentiments of love and good cheer during the Yuletide season each year as a result of their steady saving over the year by regular deposits in the Christmas Savings Clubs. It is to be hoped that the number of regular accounts in these clubs will continue to increase.

9 Keystone Boys Win Chicago Trips

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—Nine Pennsylvania boys are here this week enjoying the sights of the International Live Stock Exposition which opened yesterday and closes next Saturday.

Four of the boys are the guests of a local agricultural foundation. They are Graeio-Delarco, Ebensburg; John Woods, Mercer; Harry Friedline, Boswell, and Joseph Klunk, Hanover. These four are all members of baby beef calf clubs. Their calves were purchased by the local agricultural foundation for exhibition purposes at some of the large cattle shows of the country including the international here. The boys were given a trip to Chicago from their Pennsylvania homes in addition to receiving handsome prizes for their pets.

Three Fayette county boys, Jay Dunn, Smock; Paul Brown and Bert Lewin, Vanderbilt, represent the state in the boys' and girls' livestock judging contests. Their expenses are defrayed by the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce.

Herman Patton and Alvin McFarland, Lawrence county pig club boys, are here staging a demonstration showing the relation of pig club work to community swine improvement in the development of adult breeders' association work. The New Castle Board of Trade and the Chicago Union Stock Yards Company share the expense of these boys.

Weds Witness For State And Evades Trial For Murder

Detroit, Nov. 30.—The case of Frank Belmont, 25 years old, accused of shooting and killing Howard McDonald, on May 31, was dismissed here Friday when it was found that he had married the state's witness. Belmont was married while in jail to Irene Baker two weeks ago Friday. She was said by police to have been an eyewitness to the shooting.

As the law provides a wife cannot testify against her husband, the court sustained a defense motion that the woman's testimony given at the preliminary examination was not competent. The case is said to be unique in Michigan criminal annals, and that there is no provision in the law to cover such a contingency.

Governor Signs Chapman Reprieve

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 30.—Governor Trumbull Friday issued a second reprieve for Gerald Chapman, to expire March 3, 1926. This will allow time for Chapman's appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States to uphold his right to refuse a presidential commutation of his twenty-five-year federal sentence, which, he holds, stands in the way of his execution by the state of Connecticut for the murder of a policeman.

John Coolidge, son of the president, who was a visitor in the governor's office when Chapman's lawyers appeared with the petition for the reprieve, witnessed the signing of the stay of execution.

THE MEN I KNOW

This I'll say for the men I know:
Most of them work for their daily bread,
Most of them follow the path I tread,
Whether in places high or low
Most of them cherish the flag o'er-head;
Most of them, eager for wealth or fame,
Seem to be proud of their family name.

Some of them strong and some of them weak,
Some of them bitter at times in woe,
But this I'll say for the men I know:
Rare indeed is the mental freak
Who would order and decency overthrow.
Clever or dull or frail or strong,
Most of them shudder at doing wrong.

This I'll say for the men I know:
Most of them want to be clean and true;
In spite of the selfish things they do
Most of them try, as they come and go,
To leave some glory for men to view.
A few turn traitor to God and state,
But most of the men I know walk straight.

The Union state central committee of California suggests Gettysburg as the place of holding the next national convention.

We learn that measures are in train for the establishment of a national bank in this place under the act of Congress. The Farmers' and Mechanics' Saving Institution is to be the base of operation, we understand, and will be merged in the bank. The capital, we hear, is to be $50,000.

On Tuesday last Samuel Lilly, Esq., entered upon his duties as register and recorder and James J. Fink as clerk of the courts. That they will make attentive and efficient officers will not be questioned by those who know them—Messrs. Eicholtz and Martin retire, after having served satisfactory a term of three years.

The number of taxables in Adams county in 1856 were 5,576; deaf and dumb, 5; blind, 12; slaves, 2. In 1863, the number of taxables is 6,674 (an increase of nearly 1,000); deaf and dumb, 13; blind, 8; slaves, 0.

2 MASKED MEN
SHOOT 2 FARMERS

Enter Road House, Near Wisconsin Rapids, and Challenge Men Listening to Radio Concert.

(By Associated Press.)
Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., Nov. 30.—Two mysterious masked gunmen stalked into a road house half a mile from this city Friday night and shot two men as they sat listening to a radio concert.

R. A. Davis, a farmer, was killed instantly. A bullet plowed through his brains. William Bauer, also a farmer, was shot in the abdomen and was not expected to live.

The killers challenged the intended victims before firing.

"Davis, we want you," calmly announced one of the gunmen. Then he fired from the hip.

"Bauer, you're next," said the other as he fired.

The gunmen then backed out and escaped in an automobile.

"Davis was a plain 'dirt' farmer," Police Chief Payne said. "He never was known to have harmed any person. Bauer also is a farmer, and the two apparently were unacquainted until last night."

Senator Wheeler
Fights New Trial

Washington, Nov. 30.—Whether Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, will have to stand trial in the District of Columbia on conspiracy charges similar to those of which he was acquitted in his home state will be decided by Justice Bailey, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, after he has heard arguments, begun Friday, on the senator's demurrer to the indictment.

The arguments were taken up after eight months during which the government made no move to prosecute the charges, although Senator Wheeler made several attempts to have the case called. The court expected to be able to take the matter under consideration Monday.

Insect and Fungus Killers Must Be Registered With Agricultural Bureau

What are insecticides and fungicides?

The State Department of Agriculture just recently found it necessary to define in most careful terms these two classes of products which home gardeners, fruit growers, and shade tree owners are now becoming accustomed to use in their numerous battles against insect pests and plant diseases.

The occasion for this special attention to insecticides and fungicides is the result of the amendment to the former law regulating the manufacture and sales of these products, which now requires all insecticides and fungicides to be registered with the State Department of Agriculture. The amendment becomes effective January 1, 1926, and thereafter manufacturers of all such products must see that their products are registered before selling them in Pennsylvania. Dealers, both wholesalers and retailers, are cautioned about buying for resale insecticides and fungicides which are not registered.

In order to make clear what materials must be registered under the law, Secretary of Agriculture F. P. Willits has issued rulings specifically designating and defining those materials which will be required to be registered for 1926 sales.

The term "insecticide" is defined in these rulings as "all those trade-marked, patented and proprietary preparations, compounds and products sold, offered for sale and intended or recommended for preventing, destroying, repelling and mitigating insects. It shall not include those preparations, compounds and products which are sold for other purposes and not recommended for use as insecticides."

The term "fungicide" is understood to mean all "those trade-marked, patented and proprietary preparations, compounds and products, sold, offered for sale or recommended for use for agricultural purposes in preventing, destroying, repelling or mitigating all fungi and bacteria that may infest vegetation or for soil sterilization and in the preparation or treatment of all plant diseases. It shall not include those preparations, compounds and products sold for other purposes and not sold or recommended for agricultural purposes."

The rulings also set forth clearly the information which must be printed on each retail package. The information includes the net weight, measure or numerical count, the brand or trade name, the name and printed address of the manufacturer, importer or jobber and in case of certain materials the minimum percentage of poisonous ingredients included.

Physician Gives Barnard College Girls Nine Rules About Smoking

New York, Nov. 30.—If the girls of Barnard College simply have got to smoke, at least they have an unofficial guide as to how, where and when to do it.

A list of nine rules—unofficial and unposted—has been prepared by Dr. Guilma F. Alsop, college physician. Sex has nothing to do with the harmful effects of smoking, says the physician, for a weak man may easily be outsmoked by a husky college girl.

Should Abstain Until 21
The rules suggest that a girl should not smoke until she is 21 years old and until she has been examined by a physician to determine whether it will be injurious. Another rule places the number of cigarettes a day at five, while a fourth describes how the tobacco should look.

Inhaling and blowing through the nose are bad, says rule No. 5, and No. 6 says smoking should be done outdoors, "if you can get away with it."

After-Dinner Smoking Wisest
After-dinner smoking is wisest, says No. 7, and No. 8 advises use of a holder. The last rule suggests one month a year total abstinence ostensibly to get in trim for the rest of the year.

Cigars and pipes are not mentioned—yet.

SHOOTS "BUDDY" WHOM HE SAVED

Martinsburg, W. Va., Man Fires Pistol at War-time Comrade in Sidewalk Affray.

Hagerstown, Nov. 30.—Shooting the buddy he once saved on the battlefields of France, Wilby Cox, 33, Martinsburg, West Virginia, is in jail at Martinsburg, praying for the quick recovery of Jesse G. Frye, 27, whom he shot five times Tuesday evening when they met face to face on the street.

Cox shot Frye five times, two of the bullets striking Frye in vital parts of his body. Doctors hope for a recovery. Cox shot Frye because of an alleged growing affection between Mrs. Cox and his buddy. Several weeks ago Cox had filed suit against Frye or $10,000, alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

The two men were fast friends before and after the World War. During the war they served in the 119th Infantry of the 29th Division. Once Cox saved Frye's life by dragging him from the range of the enemy's fire into a shell hole from which they were later rescued. Frye was cited several times for conspicuous bravery.

Gets Job For Friend
After the war Frye went to Martinsburg and obtained employment in the railroad shops. Later he sent for Cox and obtained a job for him. Both men married, Cox having three children and Frye one. When they met Tuesday evening Frye started to remove his coat to fight when Cox drew his gun and fired. He fired two shots after Frye fell to the pavement.

Rushing up a menacing crowd shouted "coward" at Cox while one man raised his voice, shouting "Let's get him." Frye hearing raised himself from the pavement and above the din shouted—"He's no coward. That man saved my life in France."

Cox was later arrested while enroute to police headquarters to surrender himself.

Keep your troubles to yourself; and others, thinking you have none, will offer you theirs.
